

THE HOGANS OF WHITE AND FAULKNER COUNTIES

Don Brown

The Hogans are gone from White County and Faulkner County now-- at least one particular Hogan line is-- but they were among the settlers of these two adjoining counties, and as such they have left their mark. Marmaduke Hogan, who was born in 1792 somewhere in North Carolina, came to White County sometime during the 1850's. At the time of the 1860 census he and his wife, Nancy, who was also born about 1792 somewhere in North Carolina, were living in the vicinity of Velvet Ridge with two of their youngest children: Elizabeth, who was born about 1833; and Sanders, who was born about 1836. Today Highway #167 passes through Velvet Ridge, north of Bald Knob.

Marmaduke has been traced to the 1830 census for Montgomery County, North Carolina, where he was living east of the Yadkin and Pedee Rivers. Sometime in the 1840's he moved his family to Madison County, Tennessee, in the vicinity of Bouch Bluff, where he remained until sometime in the 1850's when he emigrated to Arkansas. No record after 1860 has been found for Marmaduke, but Hogans who surely were his descendants later appeared in the far western part of White County on the Faulkner County line, in the vicinity of Mount Vernon.

There is a great degree of certainty that Marmaduke and Nancy were the parents of Caswell Hogan, who was born about 1823, and his brother, Calvin, who was born about 1820, both in North Carolina. There probably was a third brother in their age group: Isaiah, who was born about 1825. These three Hogan individuals are found as married men in the 1850 census for Madison County, Tennessee, living in Civil District #17 along with Marmaduke and Nancy. This particular census also reveals that Marmaduke and Nancy also had a daughter named Mary, who was born about 1825. Calvin and Isaiah are lost, as far as census records are concerned, after the 1850 census; but Caswell appears in the 1860 census for Craighead County in Northeast Arkansas. He later moved to White County.

Caswell Hogan, known as "Cas," and Jane ("Jennie") Johnson were married on August 3, 1845, in Madison County, Tennessee. Jane, the daughter of Obediah Johnson, was born in North Carolina about 1828. Like the Hogans, the Johnsons were from Montgomery County, North Carolina. The Johnsons left North Carolina earlier, moving to Madison County, Tennessee, about the mid-1830's. All of Caswell's and Jane's six children were born in Madison County, Tennessee: Amanda ("Mandy"), about 1846; William ("Bill"), about 1848; Thomas A. ("Tom"), October 29, 1852; Christopher Columbus ("Lum"), March 8, 1855; Elizabeth ("Bet"), about 1856; and Robert Merida ("Mack"), December 8, 1858. It apparently was shortly after the birth of Mack that the family left for Arkansas.

After a brief sojourn in Craighead County, Caswell moved his family to White County, or possibly just across the line in what was then Conway County but is Faulkner County today. Caswell died in this vicinity sometime during the 1860's. He died of measles which settled on his lungs. One story says that he died during the Civil War and that he was a soldier in the war. This particular story relates that he became ill with measles while he was in the army and was sent home to recuperate. On the journey home he became worse, probably due to exposure; and after reaching home he soon died. He is buried somewhere in the Mount Vernon area, in White or Faulkner County, apparently without an inscribed stone.

After the death of Caswell, Jane with her four youngest children returned to her family in Tennessee. Amanda and William were married now and living in Conway County near the White County line. Jane and the children didn't remain long in Tennessee, and by 1871 they were back in the Mount Vernon area.

Thomas had said in Tennessee that he wanted to return to Arkansas and marry Jane, this being Louisa Jane Stone, the daughter of Meredith Stone and Elizabeth Ann Garrett, pioneers of White County in the Union Hill area near Mount Vernon. Thomas' wish was fulfilled, and he and Jane were married in White County on July 6, 1871. They settled to farming in the Union Hill district, and here they spent the rest of their lives. They became the parents of nine children, only three of which lived beyond young adulthood. John, who was born in 1872, died as a baby, as did Mary and Martha, twin daughters who were born in 1873. Robert M., who was born in 1874, died single in 1895 shortly after his twenty-first birthday. Issie Doe, who was born on January 11, 1877, was married to William A. Young of Tennessee in White County on January 7, 1897. After many years in various parts of Arkansas, she died in Toledo, Ohio, in 1965. James Thomas Jefferson, who was born on December 22, 1879, was married to Effie Wheelless of Faulkner County in 1900; and after her death years later he was married to a woman named Fannie. He operated a cotton gin in Mount Vernon, later moving to Craighead County, where his home was when he died in Fort Smith in 1951. David Alexander, who was born in 1882, died single at the age of twenty-one as had Robert. William Monroe, who was born on March 22, 1885, was married to Maud Sanders of Faulkner County in 1905; and he was living in Conway at the time of his death in 1956. The youngest child, Mary Jane, who was born in 1888, died in 1889.

Thomas A. Hogan and Louisa Jane Stone both died in 1903. Jane on May 24 and Thomas on May 25. Both were ill at the same time, Jane of a head ailment (probably an abscess) and Thomas of pneumonia. Thomas never knew that his wife had died. Both were buried in Union Hill Cemetery, as were their children who died young. Before the year was over David also died of a head ailment and was buried near his parents.

Amanda Hogan, the oldest child of Caswell and Jane, was married to Stephen W. Stone, the older brother of Louisa Jane Stone Hogan, about 1865. The couple lived in Conway County just over the White County line, in that portion which became Faulkner County in 1873. Their children were Fannie, born about 1866, who was married to Berry Dicus and then to James Blessing; Willie M., 1869, who was married to Melissa Reese and then to a woman named Mattie C.; Robert W., about 1872, who was married to Cordelia Ramsey and then in Oklahoma to Sarah Elizabeth Earls; Christopher Columbus ("Lum"), 1882, who was married to Ola Ellis. Dellie, Jimmy and Susie died either as children or as young adults. Fannie and Lum spent most of their lives in White and Faulkner Counties; Willie and Robert moved away. Amanda Hogan Stone died about the 1880's and was buried in Union Hill Cemetery. Stephen Stone was re-married and moved to Oklahoma, where he died in the 1890's.

Oklahoma, then Indian Territory, was the calling place for pioneers in the 1880's and 1890's. Some of the Hogan brothers answered this call. William Hogan, Caswell and Jane's oldest son, was living in what is now Faulkner County in the early 1870's. By the mid-1870's he was in Erath County, Texas, moving on in the 1880's to Oklahoma. He and his brothers lived in that part of Indian Territory which today is McIntosh County, Oklahoma. William and his first wife, Elizabeth ("Betty") Johnson, were apparently married in either White or Conway County about 1867. Their three oldest children were born in Arkansas: Mary ("Mollie"), about 1868, who was married to David Blackwell; George W., about 1870, who was married three times, his first wife being Anna Cathay and his second wife a woman named Mary; and Robert Lee, about 1872. In Texas at least four children were born: Charlie C., about 1874; John R., about 1876; Minnie Lee, about 1878, who was married to Henry Henderson; and Hettie Bell, 1882, who was married to Joseph P. Greene. Other children of William and Elizabeth were Eugene and Sam. When last heard of Hattie Hogan Greene was living in Checotah, Oklahoma.

Elizabeth Johnson Hogan died about 1890 in the vicinity of Canadian, Oklahoma. William Hogan later was married to Della Brown Dyer, a widow, and they became the parents of seven children. Gracie and Ben were the two oldest. Ben came to White County to visit his cousin, James Thomas Hogan, and stayed to become married to Jannie Wheelless, a daughter of James Thomas' father-in-law and mother-in-law, Berry and Mary Wheelless of Faulkner County. The Ben Hogans moved to Randolph County and eventually to Oklahoma. The remaining children of William and Della Hogan were Carrie, who was married to a Mr. Priest and as of 1968 was living in California; and two sets of twins: Carl and Wylie, who died as babies, and Jess and Bessie, who were born on January 9, 1898. Bessie was married to William D. Stone. Jess, as of 1968 when Bessie died, was living in Checotah, Oklahoma. William Hogan lived until February 25, 1939, when he died near Brush Hill in McIntosh County, Oklahoma.

Columbus Hogan and Mary ("Mollie") Barnes, daughter of Lawrence Barnes and Mandy Harris, left Faulkner and White Counties soon after their marriage in Faulkner County on September 20, 1877. They first moved to Logan County, Arkansas, where four children were born: Teresa Elizabeth, 1878; John Lee, 1880; and twin daughters-- Isa Belle and Ina Dora Dell, 1884, who were married in Oklahoma to I.V. Boone and Seaborn Doyle, respectively. The two youngest children were born after the family moved on to Indian Territory: James Lawrence, 1888, who was married to Mayzell Patterson; and William Lonzo, 1892, who was married to Abbie McGilbe and then to Stella Logan, being presently married to Lucy Yarbrough. James Lawrence and William Lonzo presently live near Hitchita, Oklahoma. Lum Hogan died near Council Hill, Oklahoma, on December 12, 1907, less than a month after Oklahoma became the forty-sixth state of the Union. Mary Barnes Hogan died in Oklahoma in 1919.

Elizabeth Hogan, the second daughter of Caswell and Jane, died as a young woman about the 1870's in Arkansas.

Robert M. Hogan, Caswell and Jane's youngest child, was better known as Mack. He was married on December 29, 1877, in Faulkner County to Elizabeth ("Beth") Persons, daughter of Mrs. Martha Persons Stone and step-daughter of Elijah Franklin Stone, older brother of Stephen Stone and Louise Jane Stone Hogan. The couple had three children, all born in Arkansas: Henry C., about 1878; Frank, about 1880; and Leona, 1882. None of these children lived past young adulthood.

Mack Hogan moved to Indian Territory in the 1880's. He was married to his second wife, Martha Jane Ellis of Missouri in Canadian, Oklahoma, about 1888. After his second marriage Mack took his family to White County, but he soon left again for Oklahoma, where he settled permanently. He and Martha were the parents of twelve children: Oba John, born 1890, who was married to Maud Wilder; Arthur, 1893, who was married to Dena Gay; Ernest James, 1895, who was married to Lucille Ross Thornton; Eva Lee, 1898, who was married to Frank Miller and then to Charles Riley; Anna Mae, 1900, who was married to Tom Hollings; Elizabeth, 1902, who was married to Kirk Webb; Chenynena, 1903, who was married to Bill Smith; Maude, 1905, who was married to O.C. McCullough; Cecil Leo, 1908, who was married to Ruth Hartgraves; Mildred, 1911, who was married to William F. Wolverton; Lillie, 1912, who died 1913; and Athene, 1913, who was married to Ralph Wayland. Robert M. Hogan died near Finley in Pushmataha County, Oklahoma, on December 7, 1926; and Martha lived until 1938. Four of their children still live in Oklahoma: Chenynena and Cecil of Antlers; Eva of Snow; and Mildred of Tulsa. Arthur and Anna live in California and Athene in Texas.

Jane Johnson Hogan moved to Indian Territory with her youngest son, Mack, and lived with him and his family until her death about 1896 near Eufaula. Her life was one of varied backgrounds. She spent her early childhood in North Carolina; she was a bride and young mother in Tennessee; she was a widow in Arkansas; and then there were the senior years in Oklahoma. Her father, Obediah Johnson, and most of her brothers and sisters remained in Tennessee.

Marmaduke and Nancy Hogan probably are buried somewhere in White County, but efforts to find any records of them after the 1860 census have been unsuccessful. Nor has it been possible to find any later information about two of their children, Mary and Sanders. It was their daughter, Elizabeth, surely, who was married to Thomas Smith, a native of Ireland, about 1861. The Smiths became residents of what is today Faulkner County, living in Newton and Muddy Bayou Townships on the edge of White County (all of the Hogans associated with Conway and Faulkner Counties lived in either of these townships). The Smith children, all born in the 1860's and early 1870's, were William, Alice, Thomas, Hugh, Edward, Robert, and Henry. Elizabeth Hogan Smith probably died in the 1870's.

Calvin Hogan, Caswell's older brother, had been married about 1841 in North Carolina to a woman named Mary, and their children included Atlas, James, Sarah, Zachariah, Lou, Margaret, and Fannie. Calvin moved somewhere west. His grandniece, Issie, remembered her mother saying that Calvin on his way west stopped in White County to visit his nephew, Tom. This apparently was in the 1870's, and "west" in those days could have been anywhere west of White County. Years later Calvin's daughter, Lou, lived in the White-Faulkner area and was a school teacher. She was first married to Tom Poole and then to Thomas Smith, the widower of Elizabeth Hogan Smith.

Caswell and Calvin's probable brother, Isaiah, was married to Sarah Johnson in 1849 in Madison County, Tennessee, and after the 1850 census vanished from records.

Hogan definitely is an Irish name, and in Ireland it is frequently found. It originally meant the grandson of little Og. At the time this particular Hogan line must have come to America, much of the Irish immigration was from Northern Ireland. There is a dim story remembered in one branch of the Hogan family about three Hogan brothers leaving Ireland and sailing together to America. But the details are lost. Many of the Hogans of the generation of Caswell and Jane's children seemed to have very dark hair--almost jet black--and fair skin and blue eyes, a complexion often found in Ireland.

From somewhere in Ireland to White and Faulkner Counties, eventually -- and on to Indian Territory: it was a long way, both in miles and in Hogan generations.

Lem Cockburn, as he was familiarly called, has been identified with Tuscumbia since our earliest unkind word spoken of him. He was universally kind and sympathetic and actuated by generous impulses of far beyond his ability to express or perform.

'Theophilus Coburn was blind for many years and never saw all of his children. Yet he did such work on his farm as pulling fodder quite well. Mr. Coburn's farm was partly on Spring Creek and partly on the mountain nearby. This part of Little Mountain is locally known as 'Coburn Mountain.' The Coburn family has been probably as good an all round family as Colbert County has had. Theophilus Coburn and his wife as far as I have ever heard, were fine people and reared a fine family of children. They have not been particularly distinguished in any way that I know of, but they have attended to their own affairs and 'kept the peace.' What a pity there were not more like them."

From Dr. John W. Bowen's History of Smith County, Tennessee (a typewritten book with no publication data probably written about 1876)

Arthur L. Hogan, James Hodges, Thomas Hale, Ward Wooten, A. Moore, W. Lane and others immigrated from North Carolina to this section, then called Cumberland, in 1796. They stopped and raised a crop on White's Creek in Davidson County, near Nashville. After harvesting their crop the entire party started out in search of a large tract of land which had been granted to Col. Cam Hogan for military services in the Revolutionary War by the State of North Carolina, and which he upon his death had given to his nephews, Arthur L. Hogan being one of them. The party followed the windings of the Cumberland River, and after several days' travel reached the mouth of a little creek on the opposite bank from where Carthage was afterwards located, and where they found the lands they were seeking. The stream was called Hogan's Creek in honor of Col. Hogan whose large military grant included its entire extent from its source to its mouth.

"A local legend of Smith County history concerns Arthur Hogan's arrival by foot after his horse had dropped dead a few miles from the New Caney Fork, his destination. H soon saw on the north side of the Cumberland River the home of Colonel William Walton whose daughter Rachel would marry Arthur about 1800. Walton's plantation was at Walton's Landing where the town of Carthage is located today....Arthur Hogan's plantation at Hogan's Creek on the south side of the River was to be known as Enoch." -Dr. Barry Hayes

A daughter of Col. William Walton "married Arthur S. Hogan, who was the grand son of Col. Sam. Hogan who was killed in the Revolutionary War, perhaps at the battle of Guilford Court House, from whom he inherited a large body of land in this county, known as 'Hogan's survey.' One of the daughters of this marriage, married Isaac Goodall. Mr. Goodall represented Smith County more than once in the representative branch of the State Legislature. Mrs. Goodall raised two daughters, one of whom still resides in the county, the widow of the late David H. Campbell, having a number of children, both sons and daughters.

Another daughter of Mrs. Hogan married Hon. James Rucks, who lived in Carthage some years, then moved to Nashville and from thence to Mississippi. Mr. Rucks was a member of the County Court, but never held any political office. He moved to the state of Alabama where he died. One or more of his sons settled in Mississippi where a number of their descendants are understood to still reside." History of Smith County, TN property was in the possession of Elizabeth's brother, Thomas Whitmell. The father also left Elizabeth six slaves "during her natural life," but if she had no heirs, they were to be "divided among my four children." She had no children by either husband. A Franklin Co., Al, newspaper reported that, because Elizabeth had no heirs when she died in October 1824, John J. Bell and his wife Anne Smith Whitmell Bell, Elizabeth's sister, brought suit in 1827 against Arthur to recover the negroes.

AL Records, Vol. 56, Franklin Co.

John J. Bell and Wife Anne S. Bell versus Arthur S. Hogan

John J. Bell and Wife Anne S. Bell brought action of detinue in the Circuit Court of Franklin against Arthur S. Hogan to recover twelve Negroes claimed under a will in which a trial was had at Spring Term, 1827. It appeared in evidence that in 1798 Thomas B. Whitmell, Father of Anne S. Bell, the plaintiff's wife by a clause in his will bequeathed Negroes in question to his Daughter Elizabeth West Whitmell in the following words "I lend to my Daughter Elizabeth West Whitmell six Negroes during her natural life; and if said daughter should have an heir or heirs, I then give to said heir or heirs the said Negroes. If she has no heirs, then the said Negroes are to be divided among my four Children, Thomas Whitmell, Drew S. Whitmell, Anne E. Whitmell and Thomas West Whitmell." The said Elizabeth West Whitmell soon after the making of said will intermarried with one Claudius David L. and afterwards the Negroes went into their possession. Thomas West Whitmell died under age and without issue in the lifetime of Elizabeth, Thomas and Drew S. Whitmell in October 1813 released to said Elizabeth while she was Wife of Claudius David L. by deed of all their interest in slaves, and also died without issue. Claudius David L. died and left all his Negro property to his wife, who afterward intermarried with Arthur S. Hogan, the defendant and in October 1824 she died without issue never having any children."

Moses Reeves versus B. B. UHLS. The bill of complaint of Moses Reeves of Smith County against Bartlett B. Uhls of the same place. Sometime in the early part of Nov 1838 said Reeves and Uhls went to Tuscumbia, Alabama for the purpose of purchasing a tract of land from the heirs of William Hogan deceased, lying on Hogan's Creek in Smith County. This land lies adjoining the lands of said Reeves and the defendant. Before they started to Tuscumbia where two of the heirs live, it was agreed between Reeves and Uhls that they should make a joint purchase of the land. They made a joint purchase of 200 acres for $750. The two heirs that live at Tuscumbia are James Hogan and Pruet (who has intermarried with Elizabeth Hogan, one of said heirs) for himself and wife, and also as the agent of William Hogan, the other heir (who lives in Mississippi). It was agreed that each would pay one half of the purchase money. The defendant had a negro boy that he desired to put into payment at the price of $600. The boy was not present, being at the home of the defendant in Smith County. It was agreed by the bargainers and defendant that they would take the boy. Complainant and defendant set out for home. After arriving home Mr. Jones, the county surveyor determined that there were more than 200 acres. Reeves and Uhls supposed that they had made a favorable purchase. A conveyance was procured to take the boy to Alabama. Reeves was not in the least suspect anything improper or unfair on the part of the said Bartlett B. Uhls. After a few days absence, the defendant returned with a deed of conveyance, but behold when it was produced it turns out to be, instead of a joint deed, a deed to defendant alone for the whole of the land. He now positively refuses to convey one half of said lands to the said Moses Reeves. The court orders that the complainant's bill be taken for confessed. A hearing is set. Ex. Parte. 10 Aug 1840.(Pp. 201-218)

NANCY UNKNOWN:

As the administrator of William's estate, his brother Arthur conveyed 232 acres of William's land, possibly the last parcel of his inheritance, to William Lynch who had been the recipient of previous conveyances by William. This posthumous transaction may have been the consequence of a suit against the estate of William Hogan by a Nancy Hogan. It is possible that she was his widow and that her maiden name was Lynch.

First Presbyterian Church, Tuscumbia, AL records

Dec. 1852 - received into the communion of the church

"On the twelfth of November, 1833, Mrs. Gist was married to Mr. John Hogun, a man more than twenty years her senior. He possessed few personal attractions, and still fewer intellectual or social accomplishments. But he owned two large plantations, one in the neighborhood of Mrs. Gist's residence, and another in Mississippi. Both of these were well stocked, the slaves numbering more than one hundred.

This was a large framed house, situated on a rich plantation, about four miles from her late abode, and four and a half miles from Tuscumbia. The former Mrs. Hogun had been dead four or five years, and her eldest daughter, Miss Louisa, had since her decease, presided at her father's table. This young lady was married soon after her father, and there were then three children left at home, John, Robert, and Thirmuthis.

Mr. Hogun was emphatically a hard man....To his own children he was ever indulgent; to his neighbors and acquaintances, smooth-tongued and polite; but he had a will that could not brook resistance, and a temper which, when roused, was capable of inflicting any cruelty."

From Dr. Barry Hayes:

Family letters now deposited in the Lyndon B. Johnson Center of the University of Texas in Austin suggest that he was a spirited, fun-loving fellow. When his daughter Mary Smith Hogan Hendon wrote to her son John Hogan Hendon on 21 December 1860 shortly before the outbreak of the Civil War about feeling "blue from gloomy prospects ahead" but hoping "the anticipation of them are worse than the reality will be," she added that she had "not heard a word from your Grand Pa" but was sure "he is enjoying himself." Another son James Albert Hendon, Jr., wrote his sister Donna Etta Hendon on 19 November 1866 in terms suggesting that the great calamity which the South had suffered had not dampened the spirits of the 74-year-old Smith Hogan. Even though the family had lost much of its considerable wealth, to be described in due course, Hendon noted in this letter from "(Homewood) Plantation" in Mississippi: "Grand Pa has gone on a visit to Tuscumbia. There will be a wedding up there in Dec. and he was certain of receiving an 'invite' and said he was going to dance. I would like very much to see him dancing. He would undoubtedly make a beautiful figure at it...I will write him tonight as it pleases him so much to get letters." The Hendon correspondence suggests that during or just after the Civil War, he had moved to Forest, Mississippi some ten miles north of the Hendon plantation where he opened a bookstore that also sold stationery and related items and was a printing shop as well. He evidently lived just across the street from the Hendon townhouse. In the Census of 1870 for Scott-County, Mississippi, he is listed as 78 years of age and living at the same visit, #170, as his son James Wiley Hogan and his granddaughter Anne Rand. The next visit, #171, was that of his son-in-law, James Albert Hendon. The last mention of Smith Hogan in any surviving family letter was written from Sommerville, Tennessee, by his grandson John Hogan Hendon to his sister Donna on 15 January 1871: "Much love to Grand Pa." He died probably during the winter of 1873/74, as his son James Wiley Hogan soon thereafter departed Mississippi for Texas.

26 June 1872 - The Forest Weekly Register, Forest, Miss.

Dr. Smith Hogun died at his son's Capt. J.W. Hogun's, on the 18th, aged 78 yrs. He was a native of Halifax County, N.C. In 1818, after his marriage to Harriet Croom, he removed to Franklin County, Ala., where he lost his wife. From thence he settled in Monroe County, Miss. Since the war he had lived among his children. For the last few years he survived in total blindness.

From "The Kidnapped and the Ransomed" (Pickard)

A few weeks after the wedding, Mr. Gist accompanied his bride and her sister, Mrs. McKiernan, on a visit to their friends in Nashville.

The journey--one hundred and twenty miles--was performed on horseback; and as the party rode away through the woods on a fine January morning, they formed a beautiful group. Mr. Gist--a well-formed Kentuckian--his fine brown features enlivened by splendid black eyes, and glowing with health and vigor, rode proudly at his lady's side. She was very beautiful. Her large, dark eyes sparkled with animation, and her tall, erect figure, and graceful dignity of carriage, rendered her, in her husband's eyes, an embodiment of womanly perfection

He moved to Nashville, Ten., in 1812 and was a merchant there for several years. He then came to the vicinity of Tuscumbia. He is said to have been a very amiable gentleman and was polite to the nth degree, I am not advised whether he was related to Mrs. McKiernan or not, but I am inclined to believe he was"

In Mother Monroe, Mrs. Jerry Anderson Harlow provides evidence suggesting that he was a lawyer in Monroe Co., MS by April 1848 when as the trustee of the estate of James M. Mayberry he received, evidently as his remuneration, a long list of items as well as a house on lot #21 in Aberdeen. He was also a trustee in 1867 for the estate of B. C. Burnett.

1849 - Will of father left him most of the Lowndes-Monroe plantation. It was strategically located near Cotton Gin Port and evidently productive enough to require the employment of an overseer, Thomas J. Womble.

Nashville newspaper:

We have seen letters from Tusculumbia dated 2nd last (August 1837) by which we learn that on the morning of the 1st, about 3 o'clock, a fire broke out on the premises just East of Simpson & Hubert's grocery and Commission Store on 6th Street and very soon communicated to that establishment. Before any discernable help could be collected the whole building was in flames, which spread with such rapidity that in a very short time the whole block of brick buildings to main street (six tenements) was completely enveloped in flames and all that was in the power of citizens to do was to contain the fire to the block, which was in ruin by day light in the morning.

It is supposed that Simpson & Hubert have lost from $12,00 to $15,000 in goods, besides nearly all their books and papers. Messrs. J. & W. B. Hogan, it is supposed have lost between two and three thousand dollars in goods.

The fire is supposed to be accidental. The two insurance offices in this place are losers to a considerable amount by the fire.

It appears that Simpson and Hubert had just received a load of goods from the steamboat Wheeling which they had restocked their store. They advertised all types of hardware with 20 new anvils, shovels, spades, rakes, hay and dung forks, and a good assortment of steel. This could explain the large sum lost in the fire.

The Hogans had bought the store they were in just a year and half before the fire. They had bought the business from P. H. & H. W. Prout. They advertised their business as a dry goods and grocery store on #2 Planters Row.
